Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 23 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Becoming more unsettled from midweek.

Today:
Fine but cloudy for many with some drizzle on coasts and hills in the west. A cold start with a little fog in the south but some sunshine by day. Heavy rain and gales in the northwest later.

Tonight:
Rain in the northwest, heavy on hills, moving gradually southwards. Mild for many in England but northern parts turning colder with showers arriving in the NW.

Wednesday:
Cloudy in south with a little light rain or drizzle but brighter to the north with some showers for Scotland, Northern Ireland and perhaps northern England. Blustery in the north.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Rather cloudy Thursday, some rain. Much colder on Friday with frequent heavy showers, wintry in the northwest. Showers in the north Saturday, else fine with sunny spells. Less cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.